A friend of mine commissioned a coat rack for his apartment; the only requirements being that it have five hooks. So I fired up the forge, and this is what sprang out.

36" long, 5 3/4" wide, with spikes 6" on center. About four hours of smithing, $60.

You ARE a good friend! Looks cool, are those nails in the wood or bolt heads? Interesting design.

Nice piece, i've been looking to make something like that myself. I see you are from Antigo, where exactly in Antigo? If you don't mind me asking.

How'd you fasten the entire rack to the wall when you wanted to use it?

Gustav, I'm not sure. I could forge some brackets for it, or recess some slots in the back for screws. I'll ask the customer.

I made something similar a while back using large timber spikes, essentially large nails. I tried to sell it but when it didn't sell. I put it on my own wall.
